

Today's Gear Fix: Cool Off

Just like how a moist towelette is the hand's best friend after a messy meal, the Cool Off is an ultra-light hiker's best friend after a sweaty hike. It's a small but sturdy towel soaked in natural cooling herbs/oils that gives a tingly/fresh sensation after cleaning up. The towel is hefty and liquidy enough to wash most of your body.

If you think about it, this watery/soapy micro shower is as innovative as the original moist towelette, because how else are you going to shower when in the wild, especially when water is scarce? The other option is to smell terrible which isn't a huge deal since you are after all, hiking, but there's no need now since you can carry a portable shower in your pocket for like 35 cents.

I've always wanted to meet the innovators of items like the toothpick, safety pin, and now, the Cool Off micro-shower moist towelette. My hat goes to you, Mr. Inventor. May you always be clean while on the trails.
